September for Prairie Plains is about continuous, intense harvesting which can be interrupted only by bad weather (there wasn't any), equipment breakdowns (the usual number) or by the time spent with students for their annual fall field days. It's all been great this year; the seeds have been plentiful and viable, and the education events all had great weather and enthusiastic learners. The October Link will focus more on seeds, including photography by our keen-eyed intern, Sarah Bailey.

Top two & down: Grass harvest in the northern restored prairie acreage of Bader Park near Chapman; Sarah & Amy collecting thickspike gayfeather (Liatris pycnostachya) in the Fairbury area; Sarah & Bill checking out the blooming willowleaf aster (Aster praealtus) in a roadside ditch near Olson Nature Preserve. At right, just a few of the many species of seeds stored in the blue barn at Griffith Farm. Every available space will be packed this year!

September 24th was an excellent day for the annual outing to Griffith Prairie for Aurora 7th graders. Prairie Plains intern Sarah Bailey led the session about insects. Other September outdoor education events included the annual Aurora 5th grade field day at Bader Park and the annual Heartland sophomore biology and English students' visit to Marie Ratzlaff Prairie Preserve.

THANK YOU to:
Steve Winter and Jim Schalles for seeds and harvesting assistance; and to Trevor DeMaranville for work on the combines.
